PEMBROKESHIRE

COAST

PATH

With our trail stretching from Amroth to Pembroke, the Path takes in some of the most breathtaking scenery, from steep limestone cliffs and undulating red sandstone bays, to volcanic headlands, beaches, estuaries and flooded glacial valleys.

Lying almost entirely within the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park, the trail displays an array of coastal flowers and bird life.

As well as offering walkers spectacular coastal scenery and wildlife, the trail passes through a landscape rich in the history of human occupation and maritime history.

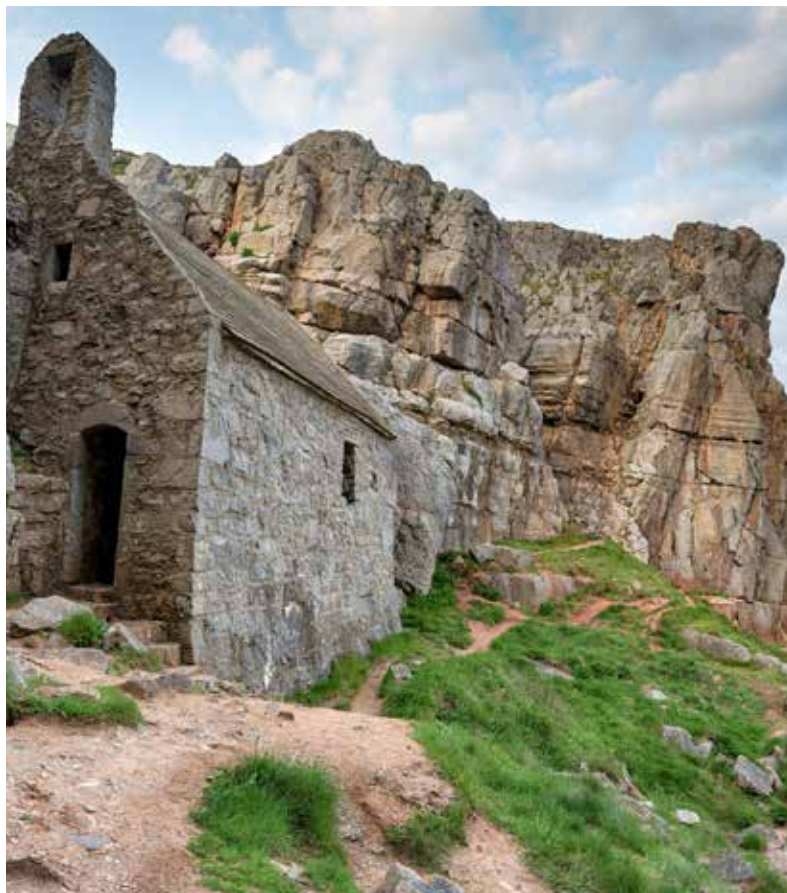

Walking the trail reveals Neolithic Cromlechs, Iron Age promontory forts, and massive Norman castles such as those at Pembroke, Tenby and Manorbier.

Take a step back into history and discover the area which was largely forged out of the activities of fishing and farming, as shown by the small coastal settlements and the farmed landscape.

Immerse yourself into classic Welsh myth and legend as you traverse through this historically rich trail.

Our Pembrokeshire Coast Path tours focus on the most popular 90km long Southern section, between Amroth and Pembroke. This section of the trail offers some of the best coastal walking Britain has to offer, passing through charming seaside towns and villages such as Saundersfoot, Tenby, and Manorbier, before finishing at the impressive Norman castle in Pembroke.

The walking on the Pembrokeshire Coast Path is generally not too strenuous. The paths often follow close to the cliff edge leading down to the beach and back up again and are well maintained and signposted. The ascents and descent are said to be the equivalent of climbing Mount Everest, there's one you can tick off the bucket list!

THE ROUTE

Starting in Amroth, the path follows along a stunning beach and then climbs into the wooded cliff top, from where it follows up and down along cliffs and beaches, passing the lovely seaside resort of Saundersfoot before descending once again at the charming, colourful harbour town of Tenby. From the golden sandy beaches of Tenby, the path climbs to the clifftops once more and offers stunning views, passing the little beach at Skrinkle Haven with its famous 'church doors' natural feature in the cliffs. The trail continues to hug the cliffs before detouring inland around the Royal Military Range at Manorbier to discover the King's Quoit Cromlech – a Neolithic burial chamber.

From Manorbier beach the trail climbs back up to the cliff tops and passes magical secluded coves and lovely beaches including the beautiful Barafundle beach – often named the best beach in Wales – before reaching Broadhaven South beach. Take in a breath of the fresh sea air when you stop to take a snap that would make anyone jealous. The shorter option of this route leads through the rolling dunes and past the famous lily ponds of Bosherton.

The slightly longer option continues along golden beaches and passes through the rugged military range, towards St. Govan's Chapel, a spectacular hidden gem engraved into the cliff face. You won't want to miss the scenes, when the trail continues towards Angle. Explore the magnificent views over Milfort Haven, one of the deepest natural harbours in the world.

On the final stretch of the trail learn all about the history of the industrial activity that took place centuries before, before finishing off at the impressive and mystical Pembroke Castle.
